

Travel and hospitality or horeca (hospitality-restaurant-cafe) is about people traveling somewhere for tourism, leisure and recreation, staying in hotels, resorts, campgrounds, hostels, dude ranches, lodges, inns, cabins or airbnb and eating at restaurants, street vendors, etc. Most countries, states, provinces, cities and towns actively market themselves to bring tourists in either through events like festivals or showcasing how nice, clean, fun and inexpensive they are. I created two travel job books which I sell separately and combine them with my big travel resource superbook to sell them all together as one book. Book 1.

There are many jobs in these fields. Some people go on airbnb.com and rent out a room or an apartment for extra money. Many people want to be bohemians and travel around the world working as waiters, buskers, adventure guides, tour guides, massage therapists, ski instructors, etc. Many people want mobile professions, working from their laptops. Some people make a living as travel bloggers like johnnyjet and some others. There are easily at least 50,000 travel blogs out there. Some people earn a living with a youtube travel channel. Others run a business as a virtual administrator from exotic places. A broad view of the jobs available in the travel industry are as follows: Accommodations - hotels, be & breakfasts, campgrounds, etc. Adventure travel companies. Airlines. Amusement parks. Bus lines.
